

Report on the BES Autumn Colloquium 2015 (14 November 2015, London)

The British Epigraphy Society Autumn Colloquium 2015 took place on 14 November 2015 in the Institute of Classical Studies in London. The day's programme can be viewed on the Society's website in detail:

The colloquium was attended by 36 participants (see List of Participants, right). The day began with two longer papers, followed by two two medium-length papers after lunch, a 2-hour short-report session, and a poster session at the end of the colloquium. The colloquium brought together scholars and amateurs interested in the study of epigraphy. The papers covered Latin epigraphy, Greek epigraphy, Near Eastern epigraphy and Egyptian epigraphy.

The day concluded with a poster session, showcasing the work especially of a number of younger scholars, covering epigraphic work on female slaves, female ex-slaves, Egyptian squeezes, new finds from Phrygia, the display of inscriptions of the Paper Museum of Cassiano dal Pozzo in EAGLE, news about Quintus Veranius, and a possible raid of pirates on Teos.

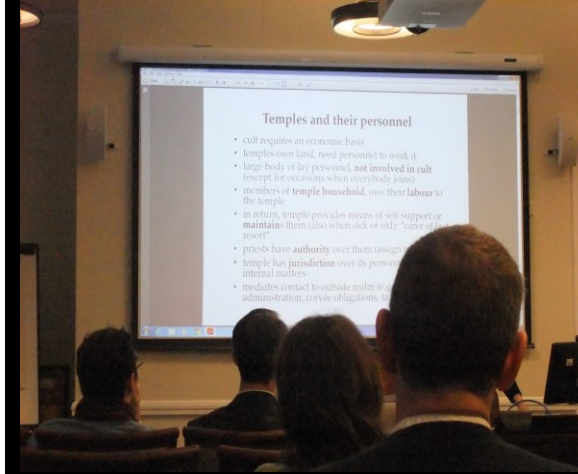

As with previous BES Autumn Colloquia, the day offered much opportunity for exchange and discussion, particularly important for the many younger epigraphers who attended the meeting and who were able to discuss their own work with the many established scholars who participated at the colloquium.

As in previous years, we are very grateful to the Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies for its support of our activities.
