

The Rectory

My Dear Macmillan

The account of money handed over to me is perfectly correct I was perfectly aware of the fact that he had handed me £10 out of his own pocket. I wrote straight from Constantinople & my father at once put to his account at Smyrna £10. So I do not in the least understand his not getting it till when he states

When I left so hurriedly I was obliged to leave my luggage at the Consul's & Hotel, packed but not locked, leaving him the keys as I had asked him to start it for me (not knowing what boat would sail next) at the time he never told me he was going into the country again for 3 weeks

The following day or I should not have left it to wait.
He then wrote to me just before I got my luggage, & as I was expecting it very day I waited naturally a few days to be able to tell him it had arrived.
& then thanked him of course for having started it for me I do not know what he meant by saying he arranged to sell my tent for me as I have it here in London.

If I had been aware that it was such a very great favour to ask him to start my luggage for me as he intimates you may be sure I would have asked one of my friends at 5 my niece to do it ^{instead} & got it twice as soon His long letter which he refers to consists of a list (one of many) of drawings ^{required} referred to & the knowledge that my luggage had started also telling me to send him out tracings Since I have had another epistle informing me

" that he is on his way to Church. & requiring more drawings sent to him If I write holly I hope you will excuse it—& I am sure you would if you feel as I do about the whole thing
Yours very sincerely
Arthur Blunt
