Jan. 3/82

My dear Macmillan,

I have just got yours of Jan. 23. As you do not take notice of my statement about the relation between me the artist & the society, I fear my letter on that point did not reach you in time for the meeting of Council.

I gave Blunt on the day he left Smyrna a statement of the accounts as existing between me & him: if he has kept the paper, it would have made clear the relation between me & him. It is thus I had advanced him £7-7/ including cost & carriage of tent, and some other expenses ~~at the expense~~ at the end of his stay in Smyrna & on the road out. I gave him £43 in gold:

~~and~~ Total £50-7/

of this I calculated about £10 wd. remain of his allowance from the Society: while £30 was his allowance for homeward journey. The residue £10 was an advance out of my own pocket.

After I had been here in Athens a fortnight, a letter came from the Smyrna Bank enclosing order for £10 from some firm in London. I got no letter telling from whom it had come, I could not therefore send a formal acknowledgment to any one. I had written Blunt a p.c. & a long letter, the first immediately on my return ^{to} from Smyrna from the Ionian coast, saying that the goods were sent off:

the second as soon as I had got settled in Athens, explaining the reason of my long delay in writing him. I said nothing about £10 in it, as I had not received the money: I felt inclined to ask him to remit it at once, & on second thought said nothing about it. I finished all Blunt's affairs in Smyrna, packed & nailed down his saddle-box, fetched his things from two hotels ^{to the consulate}, packed his various odds & ends, tobacco & Perian rug in his bag & trunk, made his bed & into a ~~box~~ good parcel: all as he asks me in his letter from Constantinople to do: in return for all this trouble, when I was quite as bung as you are, I received neither acknowledgment nor reply to my letter. Finally I arranged with one of my friends to buy Blunt's tent which he wished to sell. As you have the acquaintance of both sides, & have heard what Blunt says, I think it fair you should hear my side: hence this long & dull epistle.

I never heard of any M.S. of the slid, but shall ask. It is probably like the "Statue by Phidias" two years ago, which turned out to be an ugly Roman statuette copying Phidias's statue. Yrs Very Sincerely,

W. M. Ramsay.

P.S. If the Colophon affair is carried out, my successor (if one comes here) might find good work there. My time will be finished before anything could come of it — at the very quickest rate possibly — but war this spring?
