

Amsterdam 15th July 1886.
Amstel Hotel

Dear Dr. Macmillan

Only today I received from Paris your kind lines of 4th inst., for which please accept my best thanks.
I am very glad to see that in your opinion all important points in dispute have been answered.

Dr. Dörpfeld sent me another letter for the Times, in reply to Stillman's last letter. I sent the translation of it in two copies to Mr. John Murray, so that he might publish it in the St James's Gazette or the Builder, in case the Times might refuse to do so.

Nothing could have given me greater pleasure than to hear from you that we have carried it. Future visitors to Tivoli will unanimously endorse our theories, and particularly those who go thither in company with Dr. Dörpfeld.

Many thanks for your kind invitation to your house; you have a standing invitation at ours at Athens and shall have a warm reception if I am there. Meanwhile I remain yours very truly

H. Phillips
